Deliciously sweet top notes and a hint of warming white pepper appear, followed by touches of rich stewed prunes, sultanas and raisins complemented by sherry undertones. Delicate hints of ginger develop on the tongue with a lingering edge of bonfire embers on the finish.

Located on the outskirts of the ancient Royal Borough of Forres lies Benromach - Speyside's smallest working distillery

Built in 1898, the year of the great distillery boom. Alexander Edward of Sanquhar, a well-known promoter of new distilleries, granted a feu charter to the Benromach Distillery Company for a plot of his land, north of the railway line in Forres.

The distillery was designed by the famous Elgin Architect, Charles Doig.

The distillery was closed and dismantled in 1983 along with a number of other distilleries. In 1993 the site was purchased by Gordon & MacPhail and several years later work commenced on re-equipping the distillery.

Benromach was officially re-opened by HRH The Prince of Wales in 1998.

Just two experienced distillers create Benromach using the finest Scottish barley and the purest spring water from the nearby Romach Hills. They personally ensure that only the highest quality spirit is filled into sturdy oak casks before being left to mature at Benromach Distillery for many years.

100° Proof is an archaic term once used by the British Navy sailors; allocated two tots of rum or whisky a day, the sailors grew suspicious that their pay may have been watered down (pay cut?) and so, engineered a method to tell them of any meddling by adding a little whisky to their gunpowder, if the mixture still flashed, this proved that their pay was 57% alcohol, or above – if there wasn't a flash, their pay might have been watered down.

This whisky has been bottled without chill filtering and as a result, a completely harmless sediment may form in the bottle. What's more, when you add water the whisky may turn a little cloudy. It's nothing to worry about at all. Slainte!

Taste with water

NOSE: Lemon, honey and vanilla aromas perfectly balance the distinctive smokiness.

PALATE: A sumptuous medley of rich fruits, tangy citrus and delicate hint of spice and sherry give way to rich smooth chocolate and a lingering edge of seriously gorgeous smokiness.

BODY: Full

FINISH: A long rich finish with a lingering edge of bonfire embers.

STYLE: Smoky
